ADVENTURER'S EQUIPMENT

GUIDE

Quartermaster Handbook for Arms, Armor, Supplies, and Guild Property

A practical, in-world guide to choosing, purchasing, carrying, requisitioning, maintaining, and returning equipment used in D&D 5e and the revised 5e rules, commonly called 5.5e.

THE FIELD KIT OF A PROFESSIONAL ADVENTURER

ARMS

CONSUMABLES

Choose deliberately. Pack honestly. Return what is not yours.

QUARTERMASTER'S MAXIM A fine blade may win a duel. The rope, lantern, waterskin, and honest inventory are what bring the company home.

Issued to all guild applicants, field parties, and custodians of Guild property.

Campaign authority and final item approval rest with the Dungeon Master.

A NOTICE FROM THE QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL

Adventurer,

The Guild will place dangerous work in your hands. It may also place a climbing line, a field tent, a warded coffer, a borrowed wand, or a key to a vehicle in those same hands. Every such item carries a history, a value, and a measure of trust.

This guide explains how equipment is recorded and used by members of the Adventurer’s Guild. It does not replace the rules printed in an approved sourcebook. Rather, it answers the questions that arise between the item entry and the expedition: Who owns it? Who approved it? Where is it carried? What condition is it in? What happens when it is lost, broken, cursed, recovered, or returned?

Read it before you pack. Keep it with your character records. When uncertain, ask before assuming the Guild will pay for what follows.

— Oren Mossledger

Quartermaster-General, Office of Stores and Provisioning

PURPOSE OF THIS GUIDE To keep equipment choices clear, source-compliant, fair to the party, grounded in the setting, and useful during play.

What This Guide Covers

RULES AND SOURCES Which books may supply equipment, how to record editions, and when Dungeon Master approval is required.	OWNERSHIP AND ACCESS Personal gear, Guild issue, loaned property, recovered objects, restricted stores, and rank authority.
FIELD USE Weapons, armor, tools, consumables, transportation, packing, encumbrance, maintenance, and emergency resupply.	AFTER THE QUEST Returns, repairs, salvage, loot division, evidence, client property, and the final equipment report.

1. RULES AUTHORITY AND APPROVED SOURCES

Equipment may come from officially licensed Dungeons & Dragons 5e or revised 5e/5.5e material, provided the player owns or has access to a physical copy of the book containing the item. The physical source is the authority for its exact price, weight, category, properties, damage, Armor Class, prerequisites, limitations, and other rules text.

The Physical Sourcebook Requirement

- Record the title of the physical book and the page where the item appears.
- Bring the book or make it reasonably available when the Dungeon Master asks to verify the item.
- Digital-only, partnered, promotional, third-party, playtest, and homebrew items require separate approval even when they appear in a character builder.
- An item listed under the same name in more than one rules edition uses one complete version. Do not combine the favorable portions of different printings.
- When the 2014 and revised 2024 rules resolve an item differently, use the rules foundation selected for the character unless the Dungeon Master rules otherwise.

The Equipment Source Record

Item	Sourcebook	Page	Edition	Approved?
_____	_____	_____	2014 / Revised	Yes / Pending
_____	_____	_____	2014 / Revised	Yes / Pending
_____	_____	_____	2014 / Revised	Yes / Pending
_____	_____	_____	2014 / Revised	Yes / Pending

REGISTRY RULE The source record is the item’s warrant. An unverified item may be removed from use until its rules and origin are confirmed.

Setting Compatibility

An officially printed item may still require a setting explanation. A firearm, planar instrument, national uniform, rare material, guild insignia, or culture-specific tool should fit the character’s origin in Faerûn or Avadon. Players are encouraged to work with the Dungeon Master to establish where the item came from, how it reached the character, and whether local authorities recognize or restrict it.

2. GUILD EQUIPMENT STANDARDS

Every carried object should have a clear owner, purpose, location, and condition. These four facts prevent most disputes before they reach the Quartermaster’s desk.

Five Classes of Property

PERSONAL PROPERTY Purchased, inherited, crafted, or awarded to the adventurer. The owner bears ordinary upkeep and decides its lawful use.	GUILD-ISSUED SUPPLY A consumable or low-value item given for a specific assignment. Unused quantities remain Guild property unless the issue record states otherwise.
GUILD LOAN A reusable item signed out for a mission. It must be inventoried, protected, and returned or formally reported.	RESTRICTED PROPERTY Dangerous, rare, politically sensitive, cursed, or tightly controlled equipment. Possession requires written authority.
RECOVERED PROPERTY Loot, evidence, salvage, lost property, client goods, relics, monster remains, and unidentified objects found during service.

The Four Questions

- Who owns it? Personal, Guild, client, another party member, local authority, or unknown.
- Why is it carried? Routine use, mission necessity, contingency, evidence, transport, or safekeeping.
- Where is it? Worn, held, packed, mounted, stored, secured, or entrusted to another bearer.
- What condition is it in? Serviceable, worn, damaged, depleted, contaminated, unidentified, or unsafe.

Professional Conduct with Equipment

- Do not conceal a dangerous defect, curse, missing charge, contamination, or lost component.
- Do not lend Guild property to a nonmember without authorization.
- Do not remove serial marks, maker’s seals, warding stamps, evidence tags, or ownership runes.
- Do not abandon equipment merely because recovering it is inconvenient. Report why recovery was unsafe or impossible.
- Do not claim a recovered item as personal property until the party, client, and Guild have completed the claim process.

GUILD STANDARD Equipment is entrusted according to need and reliability, not vanity. The best-equipped party is the one that returns with an honest record.

3. CURRENCY, PRICES, AND QUEST POINTS

Magical Coinage

Guild coinage is enchanted for safe carriage. Coins do not contribute to carried weight and may compress or expand into larger or smaller denominations while preserving their total value. This convenience does not remove the need to record spending, payment, debt, deposits, or divided shares.

- Coin weight is ignored; the weight and bulk of purchased goods are not.
- Compression changes denomination, not ownership, value, purity, or lawful origin.
- Foreign currency, trade bars, gemstones, letters of credit, favors, and barter goods remain separate assets until exchanged.

Listed Price Is a Starting Point

Use the approved sourcebook for an item’s normal game price when one is provided. Actual campaign prices may change because of scarcity, quality, distance, law, war, reputation, urgency, craftsmanship, magical demand, local taxes, or negotiation. A seller’s price is not automatically the Guild’s reimbursement value.

Transaction	Normal Guild Practice	Record
Personal purchase	Paid by the member unless specifically reimbursed.	Cost, seller, item, source.
Mission supply	Approved before purchase when practical.	Authorization and receipt.
Emergency purchase	Allowed when delay would endanger the mission.	Reason, cost, witness.
Deposit	Held against loss, damage, or late return.	Amount and release terms.
Sale of recovered goods	Only after ownership and claim review.	Party shares and fees.

Quest Points Are Not Coin

Quest Points represent Guild trust, service, and access. They may unlock equipment, rewards, training, or privileges but cannot ordinarily be sold, traded, loaned, stolen, inherited, or exchanged for their supposed coin value. When an item lists both a gold-piece price and a Quest Point cost, the two are different routes of access, not a fixed exchange rate.

LEDGER WARNING Never alter an item price, Quest Point cost, reimbursement claim, or party share after the fact without marking the correction.

4. STARTING EQUIPMENT AND THE PERSONAL LOADOUT

Create the complete Level 1 loadout using the normal starting equipment or starting wealth permitted by the character's approved class, background, and rules source. The campaign may temporarily reduce or withhold some gear during the Level 0 prologue. Those adjustments do not permanently change the intended Level 1 character unless the Dungeon Master says otherwise.

Starting Loadout Standards

- ☐ Every weapon, armor piece, shield, pack, tool, focus, and significant consumable is listed.
- ☐ The sourcebook and edition are recorded for nonbasic or disputed items.
- ☐ The character has containers capable of carrying the listed equipment.
- ☐ Ammunition, charges, doses, rations, and other expendable quantities are counted.
- ☐ Armor and worn equipment are appropriate to the character's size and anatomy.
- ☐ The character can legally or plausibly possess unusual military, cultural, magical, or technological gear.
- ☐ No starting magic item is assumed unless specifically granted.
- ☐ The carried total complies with the campaign's encumbrance rules.

Build a Loadout, Not a Shopping Pile

PRIMARY METHOD The weapon, spell focus, tool, or tactic the character expects to rely on most often.	CONTINGENCY A backup for range, darkness, restraint, broken equipment, unusual damage, or an inaccessible primary method.
SUSTAINMENT Water, food, shelter, light, healing, navigation, fire, hygiene, and weather protection.	MISSION SPACE Keep enough capacity for recovered goods, evidence, emergency supplies, or the burden of helping another party member.

Personal Equipment Statement

Primary weapon, focus, or tool: _____

Backup method: _____

Armor and protection: _____

Most important noncombat item: _____

One item carried for another party member: _____

AVADON AND FAERÛN Equipment should tell the truth about where the character has lived. Work with the Dungeon Master when an item crosses cultures, kingdoms, technologies, or worlds.

5. WEAPONS, AMMUNITION, AND MARTIAL STORES

Use the approved sourcebook for all weapon statistics and properties. This guide governs possession, care, transport, and Guild accountability rather than rewriting the weapon tables.

Weapon Record

Weapon	Source / Page	Carried Where	Ammunition / Charges	Condition
_____	_____	_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____	_____	_____

Guild Armory Rules

- Weapons in Guild halls must remain sheathed, peace-bonded, unloaded, or otherwise secured except during sanctioned training, defense, inspection, or emergency response.
- A borrowed weapon is issued with a condition grade. Report chips, cracks, bent heads, damaged strings, loose fittings, spent charges, and missing parts before return.
- Track ammunition and thrown weapons when the campaign requires it. Recovered ammunition may be inspected before reuse.
- Weapon Mastery options in the revised rules belong to the approved weapon entry and character feature. Record the weapon’s source edition clearly.
- Poisoned, cursed, explosive, planar, siege, concealed, or politically restricted weapons require specific authorization and may be illegal in local jurisdictions.

Routine Care

AFTER EXPOSURE Dry metal, wood, leather, string, powder, mechanisms, and magical housings after water, blood, acid, salt, sand, ash, or unusual planar weather.	BEFORE REST Recover ammunition where safe, count expendables, secure sharp edges, and separate damaged or contaminated items.
BEFORE COMBAT Confirm the item is accessible, loaded only when appropriate, and not trapped beneath other gear.	AFTER DAMAGE Do not assume an item is safe because it still functions. Mark it for inspection and describe what caused the damage.

ARMORER’S RULE A weapon that has crossed a battlefield deserves inspection before it crosses a dining hall.

6. ARMOR, SHIELDS, AND PROTECTIVE EQUIPMENT

Armor is not merely a number on a character sheet. It must fit the wearer, be carried when not worn, maintained after exposure, and explained when local law or custom limits military equipment. Use the chosen sourcebook for exact Armor Class, Strength, stealth, proficiency, donning, doffing, and other mechanics.

Fitting and Use

- Record whether armor is worn, packed, stored, loaned, or being repaired.
- Armor taken from another creature may require resizing, alteration, cleaning, consecration, or replacement parts before ordinary use.
- Shields, helmets, masks, respirators, goggles, cold-weather layers, and protective charms need a defined location when not in use.
- Sleeping, swimming, climbing, social entry, disguise, and spellcasting may create practical questions even when the rules do not impose an automatic penalty. Resolve them with the Dungeon Master.

Condition Grades

Grade	Meaning	Required Action
Serviceable	Safe, complete, and ready for routine use.	Clean and inspect normally.
Worn	Functional but showing reduced straps, padding, finish, seals, or fittings.	Schedule maintenance.
Damaged	Cracked, torn, bent, scorched, contaminated, or mechanically unreliable.	Repair before relying on it.
Unsafe	Likely to fail, injure the wearer, spread contamination, or conceal a curse.	Remove from service and report.

Armor Services

Service	Typical Guild Charge	Notes
Cleaning and inspection	1 sp to 5 sp	Higher for unusual contamination.
Minor mundane repair	About 10% of item value	Straps, buckles, padding, stitching, small dents.
Major mundane repair	About 25% of item value or quoted	May require replacement components.
Resizing or alteration	Quoted by armorer	Depends on body plan, material, and magic.
Magical repair	Specialist quote and approval	May require components, time, or original maker.

EXACT PRICES These service charges are Guild campaign guidance. The Dungeon Master may adjust them for location, urgency, material, damage, and availability.

7. ADVENTURING GEAR AND STANDARD FIELD KITS

Most expeditions are saved by ordinary equipment used at the right moment. The Guild keeps standardized kits to speed preparation. These kits collect common mundane items; they do not change the official rules for any component.

Guild Field Kits

Kit	Purpose	Typical Contents	Guild Cost
Bronze Recruit Kit	Basic overnight questing	Pack, bedroll, mess gear, light, tinder, rations, water, rope, chalk, soap.	10 gp or 4 QP
Delver's Kit	Ruins, caves, and enclosed hazards	Crowbar, hammer, spikes, extra light, chalk, mirror, line, cloth, dust mask.	18 gp or 8 QP
Trailwarden Kit	Wilderness travel and weather	Tent share, blanket, fire supplies, navigation aids, cord, tarp, insect and rain protection.	16 gp or 7 QP
Urban Inquiry Kit	Discreet investigation and records	Writing supplies, sealing wax, simple disguising materials, evidence envelopes, map case, lantern.	12 gp or 6 QP
Arcane Safety Kit	Unknown magic and minor contamination	Insulated gloves, chalk circle cord, tongs, specimen vials, ward cloth, warning tags, leaded case.	25 gp or 12 QP
Recovery Kit	After-battle treatment and extraction	Bandages, splints, stretcher cloth, disinfectant, water, blankets, marking flags, casualty tags.	14 gp or 7 QP

Kit Rules

- A kit is a packaging standard, not a new game object. Record individual components when their quantities or mechanics matter.
- A Quest Point purchase may grant ownership, a refill, or temporary access depending on the reward listing.
- Replace consumed items after the quest. Do not return an empty kit and describe the container as complete.
- Parties may customize kits. Mark removed items, substitutions, and shared components so two adventurers do not both claim the same tent, rope, or medical supply.

PACKING PRINCIPLE Duplicate the items whose failure would end the mission: light, fire, navigation, healing, and a safe means of retreat.

8. TOOLS, FOCI, CONSUMABLES, AND CRAFTING MATERIALS

Tools and Kits

- Tool proficiencies represent training; the physical tools still need to be acquired, carried, maintained, and available. Record the complete kit, missing pieces, specialized upgrades, and whether it is personal or borrowed.
- Thieves' tools, healer's kits, artisan's tools, musical instruments, gaming sets, disguise kits, forgery kits, herbalism kits, poisoner's kits, and vehicles use the rules printed in the approved source.
 - A spellcasting focus, holy symbol, component pouch, formula book, spellbook, alchemical apparatus, or ritual implement should have a clear location and replacement plan.
 - Do not assume access to a full workshop, forge, laboratory, library, stable, or ship merely because the character owns the related proficiency.

Consumable Control

Consumable	Record	Special Concern
Potions and elixirs	Name, source, quantity, creator if known.	Breakage, substitution, contamination, counterfeit labels.
Spell scrolls	Spell, level, rules edition, creator or source.	Who can use it, transcription, legal or magical restrictions.
Poisons and toxins	Dose, delivery method, source, authorization.	Local law, accidental exposure, Guild approval.
Ammunition and charges	Type, quantity, container, remaining charges.	Recovery, incompatibility, depleted magical charge.
Rations and water	Days, bearer, special dietary needs.	Spoilage, scarcity, contamination, shared supplies.
Crafting materials	Type, value, quality, purpose, owner.	Rules requirements, storage, hazardous components.

Crafting

Crafting, scribing, brewing, enchanting, repairing, and harvesting use the rules approved for the campaign and require the necessary time, proficiency, tools, materials, workspace, formula, and supervision. A character's idea may be excellent without being possible during a single rest. The Dungeon Master decides what can be completed, tested, or merely begun within the available time.

RESTRICTED WORK Necromantic materials, curses, mind-altering compounds, extraplanar specimens, unstable alchemy, and destructive prototypes must be declared before experimentation.

9. MOUNTS, VEHICLES, HIRELINGS, AND TRANSPORT

Transport is equipment with needs of its own. A mount must be fed and stabled. A wagon must be loaded and repaired. A hired guide has limits, wages, and a right to understand the danger. A teleportation service may solve distance without solving authorization, destination safety, or cargo restrictions.

Before Departure

- ☐ Operator, rider, driver, pilot, captain, or handler is identified.
- ☐ Capacity is sufficient for passengers, supplies, recovered goods, and casualties.
- ☐ Feed, water, fuel, components, tolls, berthing, stabling, and lodging are funded.
- ☐ The route, destination, weather, law, and known hazards are reviewed.
- ☐ Animals and hirelings are not assigned work beyond their training or informed consent.
- ☐ Guild-owned transport is inspected and signed out with its existing damage recorded.
- ☐ Teleportation cargo is declared, including living creatures, extradimensional containers, volatile materials, and planar keys.
- ☐ A recovery plan exists if the vehicle, mount, or route becomes unavailable.

Hireling Standards

- Pay the agreed wage and any promised hazard premium, share, food, lodging, or medical support.
- Do not misrepresent the known danger merely to secure cheaper service.
- A hireling is not disposable equipment. The party remains responsible for reasonable planning, protection, and evacuation.
- Specialists may refuse tasks outside the agreement, beyond their competence, or contrary to law and conscience.

Loss and Damage

Ordinary wear may be covered by the mission budget. Negligence, unauthorized use, racing, overloading, abandonment, cruelty, concealment of damage, or use outside the approved route may make the responsible member personally liable. The Guild may waive repayment when loss was necessary to protect life or complete the mission.

TRANSPORT MAXIM A fast route is not a safe route until the people, animals, cargo, and return journey have all been considered.

10. GUILD REQUISITIONS, LOANS, AND RANK PRIVILEGES

Rank determines the highest class of equipment a member may request without exceptional sponsorship. It does not guarantee approval. The Quartermaster considers the quest, party composition, risk, training, availability, prior returns, local law, and whether a safer or less costly option can meet the same need.

Rank	Normal Requisition Authority	Illustrative Access
Bronze (1–4)	Common mundane gear; individual loan value usually up to 25 gp.	Field kits, rope, lamps, basic tools, ordinary weapons and armor.
Silver (5–8)	Specialist supplies; individual loan value usually up to 100 gp.	Climbing systems, specialist kits, transport shares, common consumables.
Gold (9–12)	Mission assets; individual loan value usually up to 500 gp.	Uncommon temporary magic, vehicles, advanced containment, rare materials.
Platinum (13–16)	Rare operations; individual loan value usually up to 2,500 gp.	Planar survival gear, rare mission items, secure transport, specialist crews.
Adamantine (17–20)	Council-vault access by mission approval; no routine value cap.	Artifacts, strategic assets, world-level contingencies, unique prototypes.

Requisition Procedure

1. State the quest, hazard, requested item, intended bearer, and why ordinary equipment is insufficient.
2. Confirm proficiency, attunement capacity, legal authority, transportation, and safe storage.
3. Accept any Quest Point cost, deposit, usage restriction, inspection, escort, or return deadline.
4. Record the item’s condition, charges, identifying marks, accessories, and replacement value.
5. Return the item for inspection and report loss, damage, consumption, contamination, or extraordinary use.

EXCEPTIONAL REQUESTS A lower-rank member may receive higher-tier equipment when a senior sponsor, faction leader, Guild Master, or Council representative accepts responsibility for the authorization.

11. MAGIC ITEMS, ATTUNEMENT, AND RESTRICTED STORES

Magic items are recorded more carefully than mundane equipment because a name alone may conceal an unknown version, charge state, command word, curse, creator, sentence, allegiance, or planar consequence. Use the official source for all mechanics and the Dungeon Master’s ruling for identification and campaign history.

Magic Item Intake

- ☐ Item name and physical description recorded.
- ☐ Sourcebook, page, and rules edition recorded.
- ☐ Rarity and attunement requirement confirmed.
- ☐ Current bearer and owner distinguished.
- ☐ Charges, uses, command words, and recharge method recorded when known.
- ☐ Identification method and degree of certainty recorded.
- ☐ Known curse, sentence, oath, alignment, faction, bloodline, or class restriction declared.
- ☐ Item is registered if Guild law or local law requires it.

Attunement

The character sheet must show which items are attuned and which are merely carried. The number of attuned items, time required, eligibility, and ending attunement follow the approved game rules. A Guild loan does not reserve an attunement slot; the bearer must be able and willing to use it lawfully.

Restricted Categories

UNKNOWN OR CURSED Quarantine, identify, and report. Do not pass the item among party members to “see what happens.”	MIND AND WILL Items that dominate, compel, erase, alter memory, or violate consent require special authority.
NECROMANTIC Corpse-use, soul-binding, undeath, life-drain, and grave goods are subject to Guild and local review.	PLANAR AND STRATEGIC Keys, beacons, gates, summoning vessels, artifacts, siege magic, and world-threatening devices remain under Council control.

Borrowed Magic

- Do not expend the final charge, trigger a destructive failure, copy command words, alter ownership wards, or lend the item onward unless the issue record permits it.
- Consumable magic is reported as consumed, not returned as an empty bottle, blank scroll, spent charm, or depleted token.
- A magic item recovered during a quest is not automatically party property. Complete identification, ownership, client, evidence, and cultural-claim review first.

UNKNOWN DOES NOT MEAN SAFE When an object resists identification, the correct conclusion is that more is unknown—not that nothing is wrong.

12. ENCUMBRANCE, PACKING, AND STORAGE

The campaign uses encumbrance. Apply the carrying rules from the character's selected rules foundation, together with any Dungeon Master rulings for size, mounts, vehicles, unusual anatomy, dragging, lifting, containers, and environmental conditions. Magical coinage has no carried weight, but every other object must be accounted for.

Packing Standards

- List where important items are carried. An item buried beneath camp gear may not be available when seconds matter.
- Keep dense weight close to the body and avoid unbalanced loads that would reasonably hinder climbing, swimming, stealth, or long travel.
- Protect fragile, magical, poisonous, explosive, wet-sensitive, temperature-sensitive, and evidence-tagged items in separate containers.
- Shared equipment must name a bearer. "The party has a rope" is not enough when the bearer is elsewhere.

Extradimensional and Magical Storage

- Record the container's exact official rules, current contents, access method, owner, and bearer.
- Do not place living creatures, volatile materials, planar keys, unknown artifacts, or one extradimensional space within another without confirming the consequences.
- A container's magical capacity does not guarantee order. Maintain a written inventory and identify the action or time needed to retrieve an item.

Guild Storage

Guild halls may provide lockers, armory racks, evidence rooms, stables, vaults, laboratories, cold storage, warded containers, or secure archives. Storage fees and access depend on rank, item class, duration, hazard, and local facilities. Restricted property remains subject to inspection and may require two authorized custodians.

13. MAINTENANCE, REPAIR, SALVAGE, AND RECOVERED PROPERTY

Maintenance Rhythm

When	Member Responsibility
Before departure	Inspect condition, count expendables, test closures and mechanisms, confirm fit, and record existing damage.
During travel	Keep gear dry, secure, accessible, and protected from ordinary hazards; redistribute load when conditions change.
After danger	Recover what is safe, separate damaged or contaminated items, count charges and consumables, and mark urgent repairs.
At mission close	Clean, inventory, return, repair, reimburse, claim, or store every significant item before the report is closed.

Salvage and Monster Materials

- Harvesting requires safe access, suitable tools, relevant knowledge, time, storage, and a market or intended use.
- Venom glands, spores, blood, organs, hides, magical residue, unstable crystals, cursed remains, and planar matter are treated as hazards until identified.
- Do not damage a client's property, sacred site, protected creature, crime scene, or research specimen merely to obtain saleable parts.
- Record the harvester, method, quantity, condition, container, estimated value, and any legal or cultural claim.

Loot, Evidence, and Client Property

1. Secure immediate hazards and identify property needed to protect life or complete the quest.
2. Separate client goods, stolen property, evidence, culturally protected objects, and known personal belongings.
3. Identify unknown magic and dangerous materials before ordinary division or sale.
4. Record shared treasure and agree on division, sale, or party ownership openly.
5. Pay required fees, debts, restitution, deposits, or contractual shares before final distribution.
6. Report disputed ownership to the Questmaster rather than deciding by concealment or force.

RECOVERED PROPERTY Finding an object creates custody before it creates ownership.

14. FIELD CHECKLISTS AND EMERGENCY RESUPPLY

Pre-Quest Equipment Check

- ☐ Quest hazards and environment reviewed.
- ☐ Primary and backup combat methods ready.
- ☐ Armor, clothing, and weather protection fit.
- ☐ Light, fire, water, food, shelter, and navigation packed.
- ☐ Healing, stabilization, and extraction supplies assigned.
- ☐ Tools and spell components match expected tasks.
- ☐ Ammunition, charges, doses, and consumables counted.
- ☐ Shared items have named bearers.
- ☐ Encumbrance and transport capacity checked.
- ☐ Restricted items and local laws reviewed.
- ☐ Guild loans signed out and existing damage recorded.
- ☐ Space reserved for evidence, salvage, or emergency load.

Post-Quest Equipment Check

- ☐ All party members and hirelings accounted for.
- ☐ Lost, abandoned, damaged, contaminated, or consumed items reported.
- ☐ Ammunition, charges, rations, potions, scrolls, and kit contents reconciled.
- ☐ Guild property cleaned and returned for inspection.
- ☐ Client goods, evidence, and recovered property transferred correctly.
- ☐ Personal gear marked for repair or replacement.
- ☐ Loot division and sale records completed.
- ☐ Mounts, vehicles, rooms, lockers, and storage cleared.
- ☐ Hazardous specimens secured and labeled.
- ☐ Reimbursements, deposits, fees, and debts documented.

Emergency Resupply

When immediate resupply is necessary to protect life or preserve the mission, the party may purchase or requisition reasonable replacements without prior approval when delay would be dangerous. The report must identify what was acquired, the cost, the seller or source, the emergency, who authorized the decision in the field, and what became of the item afterward.

EMERGENCY DOES NOT MEAN UNRECORDED Urgency may excuse waiting for permission. It does not excuse hiding the decision.

THE QUARTERMASTER'S FINAL MAXIMS

The Guild's stores are not endless, but neither are they meant to gather dust behind locked doors. Equipment exists to be used with judgment, courage, and accountability. A member who returns a scarred shield with an honest report may be trusted sooner than one who returns a polished shield and a false story.

Carry These Rules into the Field

Know the Source: Use the printed rules you can produce and identify the edition you chose.

Know the Owner: Personal property, Guild property, client property, and recovered property are not interchangeable.

Know the Bearer: Shared gear belongs in a named person's hands or pack.

Know the Condition: Count what is spent. Mark what is broken. Report what is dangerous.

Know the Purpose: Every pound carried should help the mission, sustain the party, or answer a credible risk.

Know When to Return: The quest is not complete while borrowed property, evidence, hazards, or disputed loot remain unaccounted for.

GUILD OATH OF CUSTODY What the Guild entrusts to my hands, I will use for the work agreed, guard according to its danger, share according to its purpose, and return with an honest account.
